Benera—Bauk of New South Wales,
Solicitor—W. H. Gatty Jones, Esq.
The magnitude of the interests involved in the operations connected with the various stage lines for passenger and mali conveyance radiating from the cities of Melbourne and Geelong, has engaged, for some time past, the attention of the projectors of this enterprise, with a view to concentrate under ese co-operative management the various and often conflicting interests of individual proprietors.

It is anticipated that under the auspices of a responsible and influential joint stock proprietary, and in contemplation of the opening of the Melbourne and Sandharst, and Geolong and Ballsarst lines of relieve, the openity of the projectors of this enterprise, the socomplish which a very small additional outlay will be needed, as a large quantity of surplus stock, the property of the openations be profitably extended.

Overland communication with Sydney by a main trunk lines, with branches diverging to the more important t PROVISIONAL DIRECTORS;

the present expensive mode of transport by Government secort, and materially adding to the receipts of the company.

With these views negotiations have been opened with the Vieterian Stage Company, Measrs, F. B. Clapp and Co. (proprietors of the lines known as Cobb and Co.'s Telegraph Lines), and other coach proprietors, who have recognised the desirability of the objects referred to; valuations of their stock have been made by competent and disinterested valuators, and calculations based upon reliable current acc unts have been entered into, with a result so satisfactory as to justify the recommendation of the enterprise to the favourable consideration of the public as a sound and profitable investment. The fact that the propristors have expressed a wish to receive in part payment of the profit of their lines as valued, one-fourth part in shares of the company, may be accepted as some guarantee to intending shareholders of the genuineness of the undertaking.

In order to distribute the influence of the company as much as possible, it is proposed to allot a proportion of shares in the adjuining colonies; a limited number only will therefore be asseed in Melbourne, Geolong, and the inland districts of Victoria.

As the receipts of this Company will be in cash, and the whole of the stock being in a nigh state of efficiency, needing no ontary for present requirements, it may be confidently anticipated that a dividend will be declared at an early date.

It is determined that no transfer of shares shall be recomplied with the Lannaue 1801 when the transfer early date.

It is determined that no transfer of shares shall be recognised until the 1st January, 1861, when the transfer book of the Company will be opened.

The share list will remain open until the 12th Jane, and the allotment made as soon after as practicable.

Forms of application for shares to be obtained of Messre.

To the honorable the Legislative Assembly, in Parliament assembled.

May it please your honorable House:—

We, the unemployed labourers and artizans, citizens of Sydney, beg most respectfully to represent the lamentable and miserable condition to which they are reduced in consequence of the great want of employment at present existing, not only is this city, but all over the colony.

Your petitioners are of spinion that they are adopting a great constitutional privilege in coming to your honorable House for redress and alleviation in seasons of calamity and deep distress.

Your petitioners are firmly impressed with the conviction that it is in your power to alleviate their distresses by opening (for the benefit of the unemployed) some of those great public works for which large sums of money have been voted, particularly the road between Pyrmont and Glebe Island; your viaducts have been swept away—your railway lines require vast repair—the Long Bay Road requires formation—and there are various other public works which would afford us relief upon this lamentable occasion.

4 We therefore pray your honorable House to take our case into your consideration, and, by opening some of these public works for the benefit of the unemployed, dispel the heavy gloom at present hovering over our circumstances.

And your petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray. Signrd, on behalf of the meeting,

V. H. West, secretary. The Bridge at Marsun's Chossing-Place.

This bridge, says the Gouldwa Chronicle, is now advancing towards completion. It appears to be strongly built, but as the roadway is several feet below flood mark, it is very doubtful whether it will not some day share the fate of that at Thorn's crossing-place. During the last fresh, a quantity of stones and earth placed to form the approach on the Goulburn side was swept away; and unless this approach is well strengthened by planking, the same thing will happen at every flood, and the bridge be rendered temporarily useless. The construction of this bridge at its present elevation is a piece of very doubtful economy, for even if it escape destruction it will be of no use during a flood, the very time it is most wanted.

WELLINGTON.
By the mail steamer Lord Ashley, we have Wellingson papers to the 2nd instant.
The Abertiser states that his Excellency the Governor has, by proclamation, postponed the meeting of the Assembly from the 3rd of May to the 18th of June, then to meet at the General Assembly House, Wellington.

Wellington.

The papers report that there had been some heavy rain in the I'rowince of Wellington, causing floods in some of the rivers, which did considerable damage.

Steps have been taken to raise a Volunteer Rifle corps, and a Cavairy corps, in the town and neighbourhood.

Steps have been taken to town and neighbourhood.

An important meeting of natives of the Ngatiraukawa and Ngatiawa tribes, with the magistrates of Wellington, had been held in the Council Chamber; the speeches were of a reassuring character.

Certain of the Weikato tribes are said to have made a proposition to the Governor, the purport of which was, that he would take back all money paid on account of land that Wiremu Kingi declares we shall not have, with some "sweetener" in the shape of compensation for expenditure consequent on the war. The Speciator of 2nd instant says:—We regret to state that, on Tuesday night, John Smith, the well-known drover, while proceeding on his way to Mr. Gillies' station, was unfortunately drowned in the Pakaratah River. The stream, which a day or two previously was fordable, owing to the late rains, had become much swollen. The deceased left Hodder's about eleven o'clock on Tuesday night, being the last time he was seen alive, and early on Wednesday morning his horse and dog were observed on either bank of the river gazing wistfully into it. Search was immediately instituted, and the body was discovered about five hundred yards lower down hanging over a snag.

Without assigning any reason for so doing, it ap-mediately instituted, and the body was discovered about five hundred yards lower down hanging over a snag.

Without assigning any reason for so doing, it appears that directions had been received by the Commissariat in Wellington to stop the pay and rations of the Wellington militia. On a representation being made, however, to Mr. Stafford, the Colonial Secretary, he has ordered the allowances to be continued on the part of the Colonial Government. Subsequently, a meeting of militiamen was held, when a deputation of their body was appointed to wait upon Major Trafford, the commanding officer, with a memorial complaining of the present inadequate pay, and suggesting certain alterations in the routine of duty. The order from the commanding officer, in reply to the memorial, reminds them "That memorials are most irregular and contrary to the rule of the service, and the Articles of War and the Mutiny Act." He, at the same time, intimates that their requests will be attended to as far as the exigencies of the service will admit.

The Wellington Spectaer states that the value of the New Zealand wool exported this year, will amount in round numbers to about £500,000, of which a large proportion is the produce of that province and Ahurri.

LYTTELTON.

We have papers to the 28th ultimo.
On the 20th a public meeting was held in the Town Hall, Lyttelton, for the purpose of enrolling a corps of volunteers, in connection with the Canterbury Rifes. Before the assembly broke up, 130 had earolled their names for the Lyttelton Company. The uniform is to be a blue serge tunic, serge trousers a lapeg top, with black lesther leggings and knee-cap, black belt round the waist, and black cloth cap. The cost of the complete suit is not to exceed $3. At present the entire strength of the corps is 300.

Mr. C. H. Brown wasfelected, without opposition, on the 21st, to serve in the House of Representatives, as member for the Christchurch country district.

A distinct shock of earthquake was pretty generally felt in Lyttelton at twenty-ave minutes past two p.m., on the 23rd instant; it lasted only a few seconds. Though the popular idea of close earthquaky weather is laughed at by scientific men, the present shock occurred during the most sultry portion of the warmest day we have had for some time.

On the 24th the twelfth session of the Provincial Council of Lyttelton was closed, the special business for which; it had been summoned having been completed.

On the 13th a large number of the inhabitants of Lyttelton of both sexes and all ages and degrees, followed to the grave the remains of Mr. Frederick Witherby, late manager of the Union Bank of Australia here, who died on the previous Thursday.

A correspendent of the Lyttelton Thines states that in the district of Kaiapoi alone (not including Rangiora and Woodend) above 2500 acres of land not previously cultivated are now being prepared for crop, in addition to 1700 acres under crop this last season. Should this increase be taking place in other districts, the agricultural produce of the commy year, and very greatly establish the position of the Province of Lyttelton are required for last years and the imports during the same period to £72,187. From the letter of the Netson Examiner's correspondent, of that date, we gather the following intelligence:

A monster separation meeting took place at Invercargill, on the 28th of March; his Honor the Superintendent having arrived in time to be present. It appears to have been numerously attended. A motion to separate was brought forward, as also an amendment deprecating the diamemberment of the province. After a lengthy and somewhat stormy discussion, on being put to the meeting considerable doubts were entertained as to which had the majority—ultimately given in by tellers, as four in favour of separation. Petitions are now in course of signature by both parties, but it appears quite evident that neither can obtain a very large majority. His Honor the Superintendent addressed the meeting at considerable length, forcibly showing the evils likely to result from separation, and the little gain to be obtained, and also proving the amount hitherto expended in improvements in the South to have been very considerable and a just proportion to the amounts received from that quarter.

The ninth session of the Previncial Council was opened on the 11th instant, when, after some discussion and a division, Major Richardson was elected Speaker.

The restimated revenue for the next six months is 148,242; with a balance in hand amounting to 439,369 besides £1545 otherwise due, making a total revenue of £87,156; and the estimated expenditure for the same period is £71,787 12s. 3d. including a sum of £18,200 for roads, and £22,282 for other public works, building, new goal, &c.

A public meeting (at which his Honor the Superintendent presided) has been held to express sympathy with the settlers at Taranaki, and a resolution to that effect was unanimously adopted. The Council have also placed £1000 on the estimates to render assistance to the families in distress when required.

A movement by private parties has also been originated to the families in distress when required.

WANGANUI.

From this settlement we have intelligence to the 12th of April.

The Chronicle reports that two important meetings were held on Tuesday, the last to ascertain what means of defence we have or can adopt in case of an attack from the hostile natives. The first was held at Putiki in the morning, and was attended by about 260 natives, among whom were representatives of the various Wanganui tribes for about fifty miles up the river, and of the Waitotara, Rangitike, and Manawatu natives; Lieutenant-Colonel Wyatt, the Resident Magistrate, most of the district magistrates, and more than 100 settlers, among whom a few ladies were present. The Rev. Mr. Taylor explained the object of the meeting, which had been called by George Ring, a Putiki chief, for the purpose of affording an opportunity to the Maories and settlers to express their mutual and friendly feeling, and their determination to be united in the present unhappy state of affairs. Several chiefs addressed the meeting, and in plain and decided terms gave assurance of their good will, and their desire that nothing should disturb the amicable relations at present existing. The Waitotaras objected most strenuously to any stockades being erected on either side for refuge to the out settlers, as they said these settlers were perfectly safe under their protection—and the natives in general seemed to be opposed to the civilians taking arms either in town or country. "Rely on us," they said, "we shall defend you. Treat us as loyal subjects, and give us powder as usual to shoot pigeons." This meeting did not lead to any practical result. The meeting of the settlers in the evening was very numerously attended. Mr. Thomas Powell occupied the chair. A resolution that Major Durie be requested to serve out the arms supplied by the Government (100 muskets and thirty carbines), was unanimously carried. Resolutions were then adopted establishing a Vigilance Committee and a Town Patrol. The Chronicle judiciously observes, with reference to the natives—some of them are no doubt determined to side with us until at least they see their own interests would suffer. Others would at once declare war against us if their interests were not against such a step.

(From the Taranaki Never, 5th April.)
We gave in our last issue some account of the action which we believe is called now by common consent the Battle of Waireka; it was necessarily imperfect and we now give a fuller account for the information of our readers.

of our readers.

When the authorities became aware that several families, numbering upwards of thirty souls, were at the mercy of the native war party that murdered out unarmed settlers and boys last week, a flively interest was manifested in their behalf, and a hundred volunteer rifes and fifty of the militis volunteered to attempt their rescue. These were strengthened by the light company of the 66th, under Colonel Murray, and part of the naval brigade under Lieutenant Blake, R.N., with a rocket tube in charge of a party of artillery, under Lieutenant Macnaughten. The plan of operations was, that while Colonel Murray with his men, the Naval Brigade, and the Artillery, marched straight to the enemy's front by the road, the militis and volunteers should reach the fank of the snemy by the beach, and, turning their position, remove the beleaguered families. After marching about six miles, the militis and volunteers reached the Waireka stream on the beach at about three of clock p.m.: they had been descried a short time before by the natives from their fortified pa on the Waireka hill, shout three quarters of a mile mland from the sea, on a commanding position, and while the force was placed in position by Captain and Adjutant Stapp on the high ground both sides of the stream Waireka hill, shout three quarters of a mile mland from the sea, on a commanding position, and while the force was placed in position by Captain Stapp the open country towards us with great boldness and celerity. Captain Atkinson and No. 2 Company of the Volunteers first came into action on the south side of the Waireka, until the natives occupying the light bush in the upper part of the Waireka gully made it advisable to secure some cover. For this purpose Jury's house, stacks, and furze fences were selected by Captain Stapp, the house being converted into an hospital for the wounded. Lieutenant Hirst the high ground between the action of the bash from whence they wounded the company of the Naval Brigade appeared some distance in advance of long before sunset, that Captain Craeroft with the Naval Brigade gallantly attacked and took the Waireka pah. The only part of the pah visible from Jury's house was the flagstaff, and as the flag was just seen to disappear, it was concluded that the Naval Brigade had taken it; but as there was no certainty that it was held, and the ammunition was nearly exhausted, it was determined that if a retreat could not be effected with the wounded after dark, the position must be maintained. After the moon set, the whole force retreated to the Omata stockade, where they left the two most severely wounded, one of whom, Millard, marine, is since dead, and then came on to town, which they reached a little after midnight on the morning of our last issue.

The storming of the Waireka Pah by Captain Cracroft which relieved the Militia and Volunteers from the brunt of the attack, was undertaken by Captain Cracroft as soon as he was informed that a detachment of the 65th Regiment and a party of Militia and Volunteers, under Colonel Murray, had preceeded to Omata, and were hotly ongaged with the enemy and short of ammunition. He was requested to furnish a naval brigade to accompany a lieutenant and a few men of the 65th Regiment in charge of the ammunition to Omata. At three he landed sixty men and officers, and guided by Mesers. F. Mace and C. and E. Messenger, used such despatch that he reached the scene of strife at half-past five, having searched every empty house on the line of march. Being relieved of the ammunition, the rocket party was advantageously posted, and the remainder of the party proceeded to attack the enemy. By taking advantage of a thickly-wooded gully, Captain Cracroft came unexpectedly on the enemy's flags had caused the palisades to be surmounted, and William Ogden was the first man in. This gallant affair scarcely occupied more time than its narration. The sailors alone took the pa, held it, and only left it to return on board and provide for the creature comforts and asfety of their craft. The devices on

"The cession of Savoy—nay every extension of French territory—is an act dangerous to German interests. To prevent its accomplishment will be one of the appointed tasks of the national policy. Every attack upon the German territory will encounter the resistance of a nationality which is unanimously resolved to defend to the last drop of its blood its honour and its right. Any speculation on dynastic blindness, or on the divasions of political parties will not succeed here; it must be known—if in France it is not yet known—that with us millions of men wait, almost impatiently for such an attack, as the magic remedy which must silence all intestine quarrels, and definitely resolve the German constitutional question. Nevertheless, a heavy responsibility weighs upon those who have led us to the point of seeking for the safety of our nation by that way of blood. To turn aside the danger by an energetic attitude—that is, what should be the duty of a German policy. But, for this, we must have the whole force of the nation gathered into a vigorous organization; and satisfaction must at the same time be given to the exigencies of liberty in respect of Parliamentary institutions. The history of the last year ought to have taught us how many questions of power and of liberty are indissolubly bound up in Germany, and how impossible it is to reunite anation in an enthusiastic effort under the ensign of Absolutism. Germany has no central power, no Parliament, no voice in the Council of Peoples. There is no German policy, no German veto on the Savoy Question, none in any of the necessity of at length taking in hand the edification of a German Constitution."

WHAT IS A LIBEL?

The path of the journalist is beset with pitfalls and sares of the law; and, but for the continual exercise of a generous acquiescence on the part of the public in the belief that journalists may often, but seldom or never intentionally, err, it would be impossible to find proprietors to risk their capital and reputation in journalism. Except at the risk of frequently offending the feelings of individuals, it would be impossible to journalize passing events, and display the action of opinion.—That it is possible for the columns of a paper sometimes to be made the vehicle of private mailee, is true even if a public event is used as a disguise. But that a journalist, whose usefulnes is measured by the care he exercises, should from motives of malevolence damage private character, is simply incredible. Such a writer would speedily find his appropriate punishment in the contempt of his fellowmen.

But we are concerned to find that even the honest journalist is incidentally liable to the animadversion of the law of libel. The proprietor of the Daily Chronicle of Newcastle has just escaped the penalty of costs in six actions of libel, and his escape is not owing to the law, but to the vicarious magnanimity of there gentlemen, who have suffered the verdict in his stead.

The last Berwick election between Mr. Majoribanks and Mr. Hodgson terminated in the victory of the former by a majority of one. It is unnecessary to remark upon the reputation of Berwick politically. For generations it has been accused of bribery; rovoked angry comment on the part of Mr. Hodgson's friends. There exists in the North an association called the Northern Reform Union, which has a branch at Berwick. Its members constituted themselves a committee of vigilance; and a sub-committee at head-quarters appointed to coeperate, obtained such decisive evidence of bribery, as to induce them to set the Corrupt Practices' Prevention Act of 1834 in motion. The sub-committee presented a report of the facts to their constituents, and a li on the public, without mainee, and bons fide, should be privileged; the law of libel and common sense would then be in harmony.—Speciator.

THE MORAL EFFECT IN FRANCE OF THE TREATY WITH ENGLAND.

(From the Economist, March 10.)

THE Commercial Treaty which has been concluded between France and England is one which must not be estimated exclusively by its present commercial effects. We all know and feel that these are but a small portion of the beenfits we expect from it. We know that a heavy protective duty will still place our manufactured goods under a great disadvantage in France as compared with the corresponding articles of French manufacture; we know that the articles we receive from France are principally, if not wholly, articles of miscellaneous luxury, which we are very glad to have and to enjoy, but which are, nevertheless, not of the first importance to us. We all hope that the moral effect of this treaty will be greater than its present mercantile effect. We have, therefore, endeavoured to ascertain what the moral effect is likely to be.

We hope, we need not doubt that, ultimately, the favourable hopes commonly entertained as to the results of the Treaty with France will be verified by experience. We hope that it will prepare the mind of Frenchmen for free trade—that it will show the French that it is really beneficial—that it is not, as they now too often imagine, a cheat of England. We hope that, in the course of years, this Treaty may prove to be to France precisely what Mr. Huakisson's first tentative steps towards free trade were in this country; we hope it may be the commencement of a consistent policy of which the final consequence will be commercial freedom. We hope, also, that trade will produce its usual effects—that in proportion as France becomes more and more a commercial nation, she will become less and less a military nation—that hereafter she may be less inclined to that ambiguous and unquiet policy which now menaces the peace of Europe.

But though we think it is not too sanguine t where in the world. And they certainly can quote words even of Lord Palmerston to justify what they say.

We the more regret the language of our Government because their conduct seems to us liable to no objection. The existing French Government offered to make a treaty which we thought advantageous to us. We assented. We had no occasion to enquire what might be the particular motive of the French Emperor for selecting that particular mode of commenoing a tariff reform; it was a reform that we rejoiced at, and we aided him. Diplomacy would become impossible if each nation were responsible or bound to inquire into the domestic reasons that actuated the Government with whom they were negotiating. In this case, we have a good treaty with a foreign monarch, but it was a serious error even to hint that we changed our tariff by compact, and not otherwise, in order to enable him to act as a simple despot, without consulting his vestige of a Legislature.

We trust that the unpleasant feeling which has thus been caused will pass away, and we do not doubt that it will. Still we must bear in mind that the immediate results of our Treaty have been different from what we expect that the final results will be. We hope that, ultimately, what we have done will cement our amity with France; for the moment, however, we have somewhat irritated the two great sections of the French people.

HISTORY OF A MONSTROUS SWINDLE.

(From the Times, February 28th.)

THE Lord Chancellor has just delivered judgment on the appeal in the case of the Aberdeen Bank. The judgment, however, as yet only amounts to a permission that the parties who have been defrauded in this monstrous swindle may sue the fraudulent directors or their representatives. First the Lord Ordinary of Scotland decided that this could be done, then the Court of Session affirmed this decision, and now the English Lord Chancellor has affirmed the decision of the Court of Session. The matter may now go to trial. The appellants are at the end of their appeal, but they have gained at least this advantage—that they have wearied out their victims, and

The Late Drowning near Windellima.—An inquest was held on Wednesday last, at Strawberry Creek, near Windellima, before Mr. R. Waugh, district coroner, on the body of Thomas Durkin, a boy nine years of age, who came by his death by drowning. Mrs. Mary Durkin, a widow, residing at Strawberry Creek, near Windellima, deposed that deceased was her son, and that she last saw him alive on Sunday foremon, the 6th inst.; on that day she went to Bungonia, and did not return till the following day; shortly after reaching home the dead body of her child was brought into the house; deceased was in the labit of herding her cattle. Bartholemew Leftey, deposed that he last saw deceased slive on the afternoon of Sunday, about three o'clock; he went out of the house to fatch home the milking cattle; an elder brother of the deceased returned home about sundown, and on finding that the deceased had not come home, he went out to look for him; found the cattle but not the lad himself, and shortly afterwards came home and told witness so; they both went out again in search, but without success; next merning witness sarmed the neighbours, who assisted in the search; about three o'clock in the afternoon they found the body in a waterhole about a mile from the house, where the cattle used to feed. Joshua Butler deposed he raised the body by means of a long pole, and the persons near removed it from the water; deceased had on his usual clothes, his hands were clenched, his arms being bent; the only marks on his person were a few scratches on the ear, apparently done by the stick in raising him; the creek on Monday was running rapidly. From the evidence there appeared to be no doubt that deceased had been accidentally drowned, and a verdict was returned accordingly.—

Houseberren, in the shop of Mr. J. Piper, draper, Newtown, was broken into, and a large quantity of ribbons and other goods were abstracted. After an unauccessful attempt to force a side door, an entrance was effected through the parlour window; two laths in the Vonetian shutters were broken to unfasten the bolt, and the window, which would only open a few inches, was forced in with a jemmy; and the depredators having secured their booty made off without detection, being evidently experienced hands. Mr. Piper estimates his loss at over a hundred pounds, which falls the heavier upon him in consequence of his recent serious losses by the floods.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 16, 1860.

W1. regret to observe that the opinion we ex pressed at first — founded upon competent authorities—that the New Zealand struggle would be far more serious and prolonged that was commonly anticipated, is so far confirmed Both in the public papers and by private com-munications the utmost discontent has been ex pressed respecting the management of this war We must guard our readers, however, against receiving as conclusive all the accusations which fall upon the officer in command. We do not know any rule of war which requires that a commander should disclose the information upon which he acts, or the particular motives for pursuing one or other course of conduct. We must wait until full information justifies a decisive judgment. But it is clear that many at the seat of war have lost all confidence either in the ability or in the courage of the chief authorities -a most unfortunate state of things, looked at merely in a military point of view. When conmerely in a military point of view. idence ceases, an army is in reality demoralised and, for all effectual purposes, its organization is destroyed. Each troop, or even individual having ceased to believe in the propriety of the orders given, or that effective support will be yielded to those who implicitly obey them, begins to act alone. Hence we have those episodes of personal courage which seem to defy the plans of the commander, and to reflect upon his judgment. Having got into situation which they never should have occupied by good luck the armed parties turned them to account or, escaping from them with dauntless resolu-tion, inflict great loss upon the enemy. Those who look on and see these various movements, recognise only the qualities which are so much to be admired in the field. They are rather in clined to applaud and stimulate a disregard of ty than to admit that there are when even success is no justification authority for disobedience, and where those who re turn even from a victorious onslaught upon the enemy ought, according to the rules of as well as the policy of military government, to be immediately put under arrest. These are facts which are well known to all who have given ordinary attention to the science of war.

In the kind of war which New Zealand seem o open before us, the tactics of a regular regiment will be often found at fault. The volunteers have some advantages over the regular troops. They are better acquainted with the They are better acquainted with the country. Their arms are lighter. They move with more freedom, and retreat with greater facility. It is probable, however, that even these will be found to cope with difficulty with the natives, whose modes of warfare, when they are trained to the use of the warfare, when they are trained to the use of the rifle, are so well adapted to their situation and their country. It is hard to form any calculation when it will be possible to subdue the natives by ordinary troops. These fortified pahs, if well chosen, would present a line of posts which would require much time pals, if well chosen, would present a line of posts which would require much time and labour to capture. They can fall back upon the inner country, and subsist on indigenous products. This involves the necessity of furnishing supplies to our troops through all the difficulties of mountain passes and hardly penetrable roads. It is evident that some new adaptation of the force to be brought against them must be considered. When Sir HARRY SMITH was sent to the Cape of Good Hope to subdue the Caffres, he found the soldiers with their ordinary cloth apparel, sword belts and whatever else might serve for the purpose of their entanglement. The practical mind o that eminent commander at once perceived that they were not in a condition to force their way they were not in a condition to force their way through the scrub, and attack naked savages who could glide everywhere without injury. Their clothes soon became rags. Their flesh was exposed to the action of the bush, and thus every step was attended with pain. After having, however, clothed them with tightly fitting moleskins, as close and slippery as the skin, and divested them of everything but their arms, our soldiers were their arms, our soldiers were adopted to cope with the light native forces of New Zealand It is quite obvious that the war must be car-ried on at whatever cost until it accomplish the subjection of the native chiefs, and re-establish soon able to rival the natives in the celerity of the Royal authority.

This war gives the rights of conquest to the victors, but we abhor the notion that the natives are to be treated as ordinary subjects of the Queen, in the infliction of punishment It is impossible not to take into account their original condition—their recent relations with Great Britain, and the noble idea which lies at the foundation of their enthusiasm one which every patriot must feel is in itself worthy to be cherished. They see that they are a sinking race—that a power which will over-whelm their separate social life is coming up among them—that they will fade before it.

They feel all this, and, with a pride and self-confidence which is certainly not to be condemaed by a free and freedom-loving people they are endeavouring to re-establish their inde ndence. We are bound to remember how pendence. We are bound to remember, how-ever, that they are legally subject to the Crown, and with the superior knowledge we possess of the relations of nations we must perceive that the establishment of a New Zealand native Government is a pure dream. Such being the fact, stronger and more vigorous the measures taken the more humane to them. But when they fall into our power, and we have the disposal of their lives and possessions, it will be right that we should remember that they have not only professed a cause which has claims upon ou respect, but that they have shown high quali-ties as soldiers, and self-denial in the prose cution of the war. How far cruelties may produce retaliation, and what colou the war may finally assume, we have no surguide to judge from but the lamentable pages of aboriginal history. All humane men should fortify themselves against the hour when passion will be likely to demand unreflecting and un-

It would be a great advantage at the present crisis of the war were some officer of eminent reputation placed at the head of the troops. The feelings of the friendly natives must be greatly shaken by the doubt and discontent of the British. The retreat, as they have called it, of the troops, without accomplishing the military object which they designed, will naturally inspirit the hostile natives, and lead to corthose who have remained in doubtful friendship with the British authorities. It is difficult to believe that this friendship rests upon any other basis than the supposed invinci-bility of the British arms. Looking, therefore, at all the circumstances of the case, it would be reassuring to find that some other and higher military commander could at the present moment interpose, and really direct and invigorate the movements of th

We are thus cautious in adopting any conclusion, from a sense of justice to the higher officers of the army in New Zealand. At the omeers of the army in New Zealand. At the same time injudicious attempts to punish and suppress opinion are no great evidence in favour of the officer in command. Notwithstanding we suppose that there are limits to which the indulgence of criticism in presence of an army must be restrained. It is difficult to convince those who have enjoyed unbounded license, under ordinary circumstances in the license, under ordinary circumstances, in the expression of opinion, that there are times when this freedom must cease—that its existence is incompatible with the common safety, and that however right it may be to allow any gentlemen to take his cigar in the open air, it is quite another thing when he insists upon sitting, match in hand, amid barrels of gun-

THE recent floods have passed a practical commentary, not of the most flattering description, upon our colonial style of bridge-building. In fact, so slender is the popular faith in these structures, that so far from any surprise being excited at a fleed beginning and statement of the structures. excited at a flood having carried them away, the surprise generally is to find that they have stood. A perfect bridge should secure a pass-able read above the reach of the highest floods, able read above the reach of the nighest hoods, and afford uninterrupted accommodation to the traffic in all weathers. In this country, however, the rivers rise so high in times of heavy rain, that the cost of building bridges that should stand clear of the highest flood mark has been reckoned too great to be incurred. And our road engineers have, therefore, contented themselves with trying to build bridges that would stand the force of the flood, even waen the waters are twenty feet above them. To diminish the resistance to the water the hand rails are made with a hinge to lie flat upon the face of the bridge, and are so prostrated on the first signs of a heavy fresh. All our bridges across the Nepean are constructed in this fashion. Nepean are constructed in this lastical, result is only partly satisfactory. For in the first places such bridges do not keep the line of traffic constantly open, as they are impassa-ble when the floods are out. And secondly, it is always a matter of uncertainty whether they will survive each succeeding flood. When the waters are out, and the bridge is covered, the neighbouring settlers always begin to quake for the fate of the submerged structure, and to fear the worst. As the waters fall, many an anxious glance is cast to catch the first proof that all is well. Sometimes the bridge is found to have stood the test well, sometimes nothing is to be seen but the tops of a few splintered piles And when the structure itself is uninjured. when the structure to the requestly been washed away. The current has headed round the end of the bridge and carved a deep chasm: or where a plank road or a corduroy road had been formed over some soft ground, the whole of it has been floated off to a distance.

The great antagonist to the stability of the bridges is not so much the force of the water as the concussion caused by the striking of heavy trees borne down by the flood, and the danger from this source is aggravated by the fact that in most of our pile bridges the piers are very numerous, the spans comparatively small, and breakwaters are not provided to turn aside floating timber. A large sized tree coming down the stream at fu swing has a very good chance of battering down something, or if it comes athwart the current its length prevents its passing through any of the bays, and it collects around it a lot of drift wood that obstructs the passage of the water, and the pressure against which at last breaks a gap in the bridge, and a hole once made, the rest of the weakened structure soon follows In a well-cleared country the quantity of rough timber that would be carried down would be very small; but in this colony, where timber or an estate is rather a nulsance than a gain, and where the proprietor would be glad to see it float off, the quantity that lies about and is carried off by a flood is very great.

For our bridges to be what they ought to be, therefore, two things are evidently required—first, that they should be high enough to be above the reach of the highes floods; and, secondly, that the spans should be broad enough to give a free passage to all float ing timber. This will cost money, but it is a fair question whether in the long run it will cost more than the frequent replacement of defective structures. The Penrith Bridge, for instance, a spirited piece of private enterprise, has twice suffered annihilation. Many thousands of pounds have been thus uselessly invested. If all the money laid out there were now in hand, it would go far towards erecting structure that would survive the effects of the heaviest flood yet known in the colony.

The science of carpentry has fallen somewhat into neglect, as respects bridge building, since the art of working in iron has received its great modern development. Int the mother country and on the Continent girder bridges, or bowstring bridges, or tubu-lar bridges, have taken the supremacy. Still there have been many works executed both on the Continent and in America that would serve as excellent models for imitation for a colony where wood was abundant and iron dear; and the timber of this country is very strong and very durable. The experiments lately made at the foundry of Messrs. Russell and Co. by Mr. DUNLOP, and the particulars of which we recorded, show how much tougher the ironbark is than Baltic or American timber. Whatever span has been possible with timber in other countries can, therefore, certainly be imitated, if not surpassed, in New South Wales.

It also deserves careful consideration on the part of our road engineers whether suspension bridges might not be introduced with advantage into this colony. This form of structure has been frequently adopted in modern structure has been requently adopted in motern times, and combines a great span with perfect safety. The cost would probably not be exces-sive as compared with its durability. But apart altogether from the use of wood, it is also worthy of consideration whether it might not be advisable in some cases to import from England ready-made iron girder bridges, which could be put together in this colony without much difficulty. It has appeared during the late enquiry that the original design for the railway bridge over the Nepean at Menangle was to have an iron girder bridge, supported on brick piers, but this has been given up, not it would seem from any doubt as to the suitable-ness of that sort of bridge, but because there was some quarrel with Mr. Rhodes as to charging for the girders according to the schedule price for iron work. An ordinary timber bridge to be built on piles is, therefore, to be substituted. This is to be regretted, for an iron girder bridge would have been valuable both as to design and cost, and might have paved the way for the useful introduction of somewhat similar bridges in other parts of the colony. It is time some improvements were made, and that our bridges were no longer annuals, appearing abundantly in spring, and disappearing with the first storms

The late floods have tested the railway works as well as the common roads, and the volume of water which has to be provided for is seen to be occasionally so great that the Engineer-in-Chief has already seen good cause to correct his first designs and enlarge the area of his culverts, and raise in some places the level of the line. It is worthy of consideration whe ther the hint the waters have thus given might not also be advantageously taken with respect to that part of the line which has already been constructed. A considerable portion of the Campbellitown extension has been under water. While the traffic is stopped, and before the line is re-opened, would it not be well to raise the those parts that have suffered most? To do so now may save both time and money in the long run. It must be remembered that the Southern line is the main trunk in the direction of Melbourne, and the further it is continued, and the larger the traffic it attracts, the greater will be the incon-venience and the loss of any such repetition of the stoppage of communication as we are now experiencing. It would be as well to make a permanent job of the repairs while we are about of those who, labouring to make the railways commercially remunerative, to incur any outlay that is not absolutely necessary, but it is no part of the public policy to be "penny wise and pound foolish."

SITTINGS FOR THE TRIAL OF CAUSES.

JACKSON AND ANOTHER V. AINSWORTH.

This was an action by a Liverpool house against a merchant of this colony to recover a balance of between £800 and £900, alleged to be due on consignments. The defence was twofold; first, that plaintiffs had been in the habit of systematically charging a large advance upon the true prices of the goods consigned; secondly, that among the goods charged for as actual consignments on defendant's account was a quantity of dead stock, which defendant was to have disposed of as he found opportunity, being responsible only for actual receipts.

An application was now moved for a postponement, upon the ground that smaterial witness had gone to the Kundra diggings, and that it had been found impossible to procure his attendance in time. This witness had formerly been a clerk in plaintiff's employment, and had been latterly a clerk in the Bank of New South Wales. His evidence, it was sworn, would go to sustain both branches of the defence already alluded to.

After a good deal of discussion, a reference to arbitration was agreed to, and Sir William Manning was chosen as arbitrar.

Mr. Darvall, Q.C., and Mr. Faucett appeared for the plaintiffs, and Mr. Martin, Q.C., for the defendant.

RICHARDS V. QUINN.*

This was an action for breach of a contract as to the condition of certain sheep sold by defendant to the condition of certain sheep sold by defendant to the plaintiff. The flock forming the subject matter of this suit was one of nearly a thousand ewes, for which plaintiff paid lts, per head, and which were, it was alleged, to have been in good fat condition, fit for the butcher. But instead of this, it was asserted, their condition was so bad that plaintiff got but 7s. a head for them. He not only claimed this difference between these prices, but sought compensation for not having been able to avail himself of a rise in the market which had taken place. Defendant pleaded the general issue, and that the sheep were in good condition.

JAMES V. MOSS.

Plaintiff is the landlord of the Royal Oak, Pittstreet, and defendant is a wine and spirit merchant.
The latter supplied the former with goods, and advanced him money, taking as security a bill of sale on the household furniture, bar fittings, and stock in trade. After the time for payment had expired, plaintiff induced his landlord to distrain for rent, and before the expiration of the five days allowed by law, Mr. Cockburn received a message requesting his attendance at the Royal Oak, and on his arrival plaintiff put the warrant of distress in his hands, requesting him to sell at once, and with closed doors.
Cockburn refused to close the doors, but proceeded to sell. Shortly after defendant arrived with Mr. Moore, the auctioneer, and the goods were claimed under defendant's bill of sale, who then made use of the words which formed the foundation of the action, and which plaintiff alleged were "you are a d—d vagabond, you've robbed me." After some objection on the part of plaintiff, Mr. Moore was allowed to proceed with the sale, at the close of which all parties drank together: and plaintiff said to defendant, "to show you I have no animosity, I will give you an order if you will supply me." Defendant said he would supply him for cash, and then received an order for a case of gin, and some brandy, which he sent up, and was paid for. According to the evidence of defendant and his witness, the words used were,
"you d——d vagabond are you going to rob me," and had reference to plaintiff si inducing the landlord to distrain, and sell to the prejudice of defendant.

CENTRAL POLICE COURT.

BEFORE the Mayor, Mr. Cohen, Captain Scott, Mr. Burdekin, Mr. Gordon, Mr. Ross, Mr. Peden, Mr. Acher.

Birvork the Mayor, Mr. Cohen, Captain Scott, Mr. Burdekin, Mr. Gordon, Mr. Ross, Mr. Peden, Mr. Asher.

Eight drunkards were fined in the usual penalties, and one was dealt with under the Vagrant Act, and sent to gaol for one month.

Mary Lockwood was brought before the Court by warrant, having neglected to appear in answer to a summons, charged with having, within hearing of passengers in a public street, made use of obscere anguage, and being convicted thereof, was sentenced to pay a penalty of £5, or to be imprisoned three months.

Mary Little, of note as a petty larcenist, was yesterday found having in her possession a pair of new boots, and giving unsatisfactory statements concerning them, was taken into custody on suspicion of having stolen them. Being unable to satisfy their Worships that she rightly possessed the boots, ahe was sentenced to be imprisoned one month.

Atchibald M. Robertson was this morning apprehended by inspector Hurrison, is consequence of telegraphic information from Melbourne, on a charge of having embezzled moneys the property of the National Bank of Australasia at Melbourne. He admitted that he is the person alluded to. Remanded to Melbourne: bail being allowed for his appearance, himself in £100 with two sureties in £39 each.

George Williams was brought before the Court

ch. George Williams was brought before the Court appearance, himself in £100 with two sureties in £56 each.

George Williams was brought before the Court by sergeant Levy, charged with having attempted to pick the pocket of Sarah Weldon. Froscutirs deposed that between three and four yesterday afternoon, while at Moore's sale-room in Pitt-street, the felt a pull at her dress, and looking about, found the prisoner at her side, in the act of withdrawing his hand from her pocket; she advised him to keep off, or she would give him into custody; not long afterward, at Cockburn's sale, she found a hand nearly at the bottom of her pocket, and found the prisoner again at her side before he could wholly withdraw his hand; the prisoner went quickly away, but was followed and given into custody by a boy. To be imprisoned and kept to hard labour six calendar months.

John Harrington West was charged with having, on Friday night last, in Macquarie-street, excited a mob to commit a breach of the peace. The evidence was substantially the same as that given into a violent as Arkins in his language, had assaulted no one, and was not one of those who stempted to force a passage through the gate of the Parliament House. Under these circumstance their Worships thought that the law would be sufficiently vindicated by requiring the defendant to give auretia, himself in £80, with two others in £40 each, to keep the peace for twelve months, or, failing in this, to be imprisoned one month. This prosecution, as well as that against Arkins, was conducted by Mr. Cory.

William Lees was found guilty of having, in a public place, made use of language calculated to excite William Kenny to commit a breach of the peace, and was ordered to pay a penality of 40s., with 3s. 6d. costs.

Matthew Chine, publican, found guilty of having kept open house for the sale of liquor on Sunday, was fined 10s., with 14s. costs.

In the menth of August last, an order was made for the payment, by Edward Walton, of 20s. weekly for the support of his wife. Application was to-day made that the order may be varied

The eleventh annual meeting of the members of the Australian Mutual Provident Society was held yesterday at three o'clock, Mr. J. Fairfax took the chair.

The Chairman having read the advertisement convening the meeting, said, they would not be detained for many minutes in consequence of the very great increase to the business of the society the auditors had not yet completed auditing the accounts; the directors therefore proposed that the meeting should be adjourned for one week. The directors had held a meeting, and it was agreed that the following resolution should be submitted:—"The audit of 'the accounts not being fully completed, the business of the society having greatly increased during the year, and the quinquennial balances which have taken longer time than was expected having to be considered, the Board of Directors begt or recommend that this meeting stand adjourned to this day week to allow of the auditors making their report." He would mention that the directors' report was quite ready; but they thought it would be better to adjourn the entire business until this day week.

Mr. E insworth moved the adjournment of the meetir to this day week.

Mr. COROAN proposed as an amendment, "That the business of the meeting stand adjourned until this day week, excepting that of electing two directors, which shall now be proceeded with." He thought it would greatly inconvenience some persons who had come a distance to vote if the election of directors, was not proceeded with a portion of the business, and read the 34th and 40th clauses, which gave the meeting this power, as well as that of adjourning to some future day.

Mr. Stephen) whether they could go on with a portion of the business, and read the 34th and 40th clauses, which gave the meeting this power, as well as that of adjourning to some future day.

Mr. Holy thought it would facilitate the business if they proceeded with the election of directors, more especially as many persons had come here to-day for that purpose.

Mr. Ross pointed out that by the especially as many persons that purpose.

Mr. Ross pointed out that by their rules if there were not eleven members present at the adjourned meeting, the secretary could adjourn the meeting.

The CHAIRMAN said he was not afraid of there not being eleven persons present, as he had generally found their meetings were well attended.

The amendment was then put and carried.

The CHAIRMAN then called upon the meeting to elect two scrutineers.

A resolution that Mr. Hughes and Mr. S. A. Joseph be scrutineers for such election of directors, was put and carried unanimously.

The members of the society then proceeded to ballot for directors.

The election was continued up to six o'clock, and was then adjourned to four o'clock this day.

JUVENILE FORKION MISSIONARY SOCIETY.—The sixth quarterly meeting of this society was held in the Schoolroom adjoining the Congregational Church, Piti-street, yesterday evening. Mr. G. C. Tuting was moved into the chair, and opened the meeting by announcing a hymn, which being sung and a prayer offered, he made a few appropriate introductory remarks. He then called on the socretary, Mr. A. Allen, to read the report. This stated that, notwith-standing the many difficulties the society had one tended with during the quarter, the subscriptions had amounted to £13 15-8, 34d. Mr. T. Griffiths, in a characteristic address, moved the adoption of the report, which was seconded by Mr. A. Hunt, put, and carried. Mr. A. Wood then moved a resolution affirming that there would be for the future a monthly prayer meeting in connection with the society. The motion was seconded by Mr. T. Wilker, put and adopted. The Rev. W. Ridley then addressed the meeting on the heathenism existing is Sydncy—the intemperance, destitution, and vice prevailing in the city, as shown in a report recently presented to the Legislative JAssembly. Mr. H. B. Lee followed. The chairman then offered a few observations, and the meeting was closed with prayer. servations, and the meeting was closed with prayer.

Several other brief addresses were made at the conclusion of these proceedings, and ultimately Mr. White was vociferously called, but (if present) did not appear on the platform before the meeting was partially dispersed.

THE SNOWY RIVER.

The following is an extract from a letter received yesterday:—
"My principal reason for commencing my letter to-night is to explain to you, so that you may let the Sydney merchants know what an immense deal of trade they are losing by allowing the Victorian people to bring their goods across the Murray duty free. Not only is a large source of revenue lost to the Government, but the greater portion of the trade with the Snowy is being carried on with Beechworth and Melbourne; and I feel quite sure that if a custom-house is not established at Albury the greater portion of the trade with the Snowy will be done by Melbourne. Their means of transit are so much quicker than the Sydney side that it would even pay storekeepers in Tunut (more particularly at the present time) to give a few shillings extra carriage, and get their goods from Melbourne. Waggons can be got which will do the journey from Melbourne to here in three weeks, and bind themselves to time. Look what an advantage that would be to me just now, when it takes fully three weeks to get goods from Goulburn. The Sydney people are, perhaps, not aware that immense quantities of spirits are passing through Tunut from Melbourne; this afternoon teams loaded with seven tons spirits passed through, and I am informed that is nothing to what is on the way, so the sooner the public is made acquainted with the fact the speedier the remedy will be applied. I should think if proper representations were made to the Government that they would immediately enforce the Customs duties at Albury. I saw that the matter was brought before the Assembly, but I think it has been allowed to drop; but I can assure you, that if the Sydney people wish to derive any benefit from the Snowy, they had better look sharp after this matter, or we shall be in-undated with goods from Melbourne." THE SNOWY RIVER.

KIANDRA.—SPIRITS.—The Governor-General, in pursuance of the powers vested in him by the Act of the Governor and Legislative Council, 13th Victoria, No. 29, has declared the town of Kiandra to come within the operation of the 3rd clause of the said Act, so as to constitute it a place at which any fermented or spirituous liquor, or any mixed liquor, part of which is fermented or spirituous, may be sold in quantities not less than two galions at one time.

Corroner's Inquest.—The City Coroner held an inquest at the Railway Hotel, George-street South, vesterday, on the body of an infant, named John Whithall, aged three months. The infant died in the B Division watch-house, whither it had been taken to its mother, who was in custody for drunkenness. The evidence of the different witnesses revealed a fearful amount of destitution and wretchedness, consequent on intemperate habits. It appeared that the mother of the infant lived with her husband and three of the infant lived with her husband and three children (beside the deceased) in Fiztroy-street, Surry Hills. Both husband and wife were addicted to intemperance, and had been seen lying on the floor of their domicile drunk together. As a consequence of such a course the children were neglected, and their home rendered comfortless—the house being stripped of its furniture to gratify the parents' insatiable appetites for drink. It would also appear from the fact of the deceased being afflicted with syphilis (held to have keen contracted from its mother), that drunkenness was not the only vice to which the woman was addicted. It was stated by one of the witnesses that the husband of the woman denied the paternity of the deceased chaing from the child's diseased state that it would die, took it to a Roman Catholic clergyman, who beptiesed it. At about one o'clock the sunday morning the woman was apprehended for drunkenness and conveyed to the D Division watchhouse, and two hours later the infant was brought down and left with her. It was then covered with sores, badly clad, and very dirty. Shortly before twelve o'clock that night one of the police-sergeants went into the cell in which the prisoner was contined, and found the infant dead; the woman stude that it had expired shout half an hour before. The body was then removed to the Benevolent Asylum dead-ho

RICHARDSON and WRENCH have received instructions from the proprietor, GEORGE HARRIS, Esq., to sell by public acction, at the Rosens, Bank Buildings, George-street, on TUESDAY, 23rd May, at 11 o'clock,

The following portion of the celebrated ULTIMO ESTATE, subdivided into building allotments, adjoining or close to Parramatiz-street.

BLOUK II E.—20 ALLOTMENTS, having each 20 to 30 feet frontage to HARRIS and MEW STREETS, with a depth of 122 feet extending to a lane 20 feet wide.

with a cept of 12 rest extending to a lane 20 set wide.

""These are the most valuable allotments on the catao, fronting principally the main street, in a line with Betany-street, and immediately adjoining Parramattaterset, at the Railway Bridge.

BLOCK 25.—54 ALLOTMENTS, having each frontages of about 20 feet to Macathur, Jones, Crown, and William streets, with depths of 100 to 122 feet, griending to a lase 26 feet wide.

BLOCK 57.—54 allotments, fronting Wattle, Ann, Jones, and Macathur streets, with devides varying from 100 to 122 feet to lanes 20 feet wide.

"The allotments in blocks 17 and 25 are situate on the fine level ground immediately opposits Ultimo Outtage, and within a few hundred feet from Parramattaterset.

the fine level ground immediately opposits Ultimo Cottage, and within a few hundred feet from Parramattastreet.

68 In announcing the opening sale of this VALUA-RLE FREEHOLD CITY ESTATE, it is only necessary to state that it will be WITHOUTH RESERVÉ, to attract the attention of builders and capitalists, while the very LIEBRAL TERMS under which the allotments will be sold offer inducements to these of more limited means to invest with great confidence.

The portions now advertised occupy the most valuable positions on the estate, in the midst of the most populous part of the city, and within a few feet of its main thereughfare; and there cannot be a doubt that those who are the first purchasers of Ultime will reap eventually an immense profit, so soon as the public gradually become aware of the fact that this hitherto prohibited city iand can be disposed of, and the great importance and value of the locality.

Ultime is the great connecting link of the two extremes of the city, being equally accessible from the north and south ends, and must eventually become one of the great approaches to and from the interior, while at the same time it possesses very large prospective advantages, and will every year increase in value.

Plan on view at the rooms, where also LITHIGERAPHS can be obtained, and as each allotment is pegged out, intending purchasers can make their selection prior to the sale with the greatest facility.

COOK'S RIVER ROAD.

PURKIS and LAMBERT have been favoured with instructions from the proprietor, Mr. Thomas Thruchly, to sell the above choice and well-situated freehold property, one of the early grants, forming part of section 41 in the parish of St. Phillip, in the city of Sydney, and containing 34; perches of land, at their New Rooms, 255, George-street North, THIS DAY, 16th instant, at 11 o'clock precisely.

The house has been licensed for the part thirty years, commands a most lucrative business, and occupies one of the best positions in the city; it will readily let at a good rental.

the best positions in the city; it will readily let at a good rebtal.

At the same time will be sold the licence and good-will of the Lémon Tree Inn.

The The Auctioneers may observe that such extensive plots of land as the above, are but very seldom to be bought in the market; with the present buildings it may be classed as a well-paying property, and with a slight outlay might be very considerably improved upon, so as to become highly remunerative to the fortunate purchaser.

As to the position it is undeniably good, Phillip-street being nearly equal to Macquarie-street, and has the greater advantage of extending through to the Circular Quay—the improvements in it are worthy of note, a good class of house springing up rapidly wherever fresh buildings are erected; besides private dwelling houses are several new public offices, such as the Government Printing Office, the Kaliway Offices, Water Police, &c., in fact it is progressing rapidly in value and importance, is a fair wide atreet, and very nearly level from end to end. The prospective advantages are also very great.

There cannot be a doubt that Carriagton, from its magnificent harbour, is destined some day to become one of our principal sea coast towns. It is also the outlet to extensive agricultural and pastoral districts, within which are included some of the richest established gold-fields. The waters of the Bay abound in the choicest fish—the shores form one vast bed of shells for lime burning; while the neighbouring forests consist of the finest kinds of timber, particularly those most sought after for shipbuilding. Parties, therefore, with a little space capital would find this an excellent opportunity for investment.

The Times of the 19th of March gives the following report of the state of trade in the manufacturing districts:—

following report of the state of trade in the manufacturing districts:—.

Birmingham.—Trade here continues good in almost every department. There has been a partial cossation of country orders just prior to the close of the quarter, but the manufacturers are all of them fully occupied, and will so remain for the present with orders previously on their books. The Canadian orders for the season are now in course of execution; these have been comparatively small, though larger than for two or three previous years. The United trade trade is fast. The general continues are now in course of execution; these have been comparatively small, though larger than for two or three previous years. The United trade trade is fast. Leeda.—The woolien cloth trade, so far as the sales of goods are concerned, has been rather flat during the week; but the maxufacturers are well employed—several of them having good orders on hand—and stocks, though they have lately been increasing, are not larger than usual at this period of the year. Meltons and isddes slothe, as well as those for the uniforms of the volunteer rifle corpa, are in fair demand. There is rather more fancies in the market than are required, and only the better kinds are readily salesable. Wools of all kinds are very firm in price, and a fair business is doing by the local brokers. The flax trade continues moderately active, and a fittle better demand is experienced for both the raw material, varias and goods. Fig.—It appears that you want "the stanehest Free-trader to show you where the manufactures of any country have arisen without the interference of Government." That is what you are the interference of Government. "That is what you are the interference of Government." That is what you are the red to have said the other night in jobin speech before to have add the other night in jobin speech before the said what you meant; what you must have meant was tractly what you meant; what you must have meant was tractly what you meant; what you must have meant was tractly what you meant; what you must have meant was tractly what you meant; what you must have meant was to protect them against Free Trade. That, however, was not eastly what you meant; in the line you where where such things have happened; and, if you please to listen, I shall have much pleasure in tealing you where abouts they are situate.

You know Victoria? and Tasumania? and South Australia? and you must know all about your own adopted country, New Bouth Walse. Well, ar, in all these places manufactories of various kinds have been established for years, without the interference or assistance of Government. There are manufactories of beef and mutton, of wheat and flour, of soap, canties, sail, wine, spirita, beer, and tobacce; inctories of leather, wool, tallow, gold, farma, dwelling-house, and along, of carts and carriage, of hosts and ships, besides hundreds of other valuable commodities, the product of human contrivance and manual labour. All these have a arisen, and are established, not only without Government, assistance, but without Government interference, and the part of the part o

THE CASE OF MR. N. L. KENTISH.

To the Edutor of the Herald.

Sin,—The letter and petition to the Legislative Assembly of Mr. Kentish, which appeared in your paper a few days since, reveal such a state of things in connection with the administration of justice at the Molong Bench, that the Government will, I conclude, see the necessity of at once instituting a rigid and searching inquiry to be made into the circumstances set forth by that gestleman, as well that in addition to justice being extended to him, the seat of justice, and its fair and impartial administration, may be preserved from corruption and degradation.

Without making further comment at present upon this apparently very extraordinary case, I will only observe that if it is eventually shown that these four Molong magistrates have been guilty of the gross corruption and perversion of justice with which they are charged, in their smiety to shield and support in his iniquity and vice this Mr. R. H. Mitchell, C.P.S., which resulted in the removal from the public service of, I believe, a meritorious and well known old colonist and public officer, then I say, not only to meet the requirements of this case, but in order to establish that confidence in, and respect for, the various Courts of Petty Sessions throughout the country, an example likely to be of a lasting nature, should be made in this instance.

It is high time that it should be clearly underwiood by some magistrates that it was not merely to serve risking own PURPOSES, or have the honour attached to their names, that they were placed in the Commission of the Peace, but for a higher and worthier end, that of the preservation of peace and order, the disponsation of JUSPICE between their fellow-men, to the best of their ability, and to set an example to others worthy of intation.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

ITALY AND THE OPPOSITION.

ITALY AND THE OPPOSITION.

(From the Spectator, March 17.)

The debate on Tuesday night did service both to Italy and her Majesty's Government, but it did a great disservice to the Opposition. No one has any title to object to such discussions but the leader of the country party and the country party itself, for to none others has it done any damage. The debate has served the Government, because it has brought out with more distinctness than ever, their truly national and comprehensively European policy; and it has served Italy, because it gave occasion for an emphatic repetition of the fundamental principle that every nation has a right to regulate its own internal affairs—the principle of the statesman of 1688, the principle of the Wigs in 1815, and the principle of the Liberals in 1860. It is for maintaining this principle, ever since they came into office, with unflinching firmness, that the Government have incurred the censure of the Opposition.

But the Government have incurred the censure of the or the Wigs in 1815, and the principle of the Liberals in 1860. It is for maintaining this principle, ever since they came into office, with unflinching firmness, that the Government have incurred the censure of the Opposition.

But the Government have been served by those censures, since they are not levelled at the British Government alone, but at the great principle at the base of our institutions, and at the instincts and convictions of the British people. As censures they concern us no further; but as an indication of the course which the leaders of the Opposition, hoasting itself to be more national than the nation, and reprobating a treaty with France on ultra-nationalistic grounds, they do concern us, for viewed in that light they afford a measure of the statesmanship of Mr. Disraeli and his late colleagues, especially of the Malmesbury section of the pro-Austrians.

The accusation is that the Government have rendered the annexation of Savoy inevitable. How: By their policy in Italy. According to Mr. Disraeli's version of that policy, the Government have promoted the annexation of Tuscany, Modena, Parma, and the Romagna to Piedmont, not by direct interference, but by opposing the designs of France; helping to prevent her from forming an Italian Confederation, from restoring the Dukes, from establishing a kingdom of Central Italy side by side with Austria, Naples, the Pope, and Piedmont. And when we come to look into the nature of the opposition to France and the interference in Italy, we find it limited to the giving of advice when advice was asked, to the statement of opinions when projects were submitted, and to the declaration at all times and seasons, that the Italians have the right to settle their own affairs without French or Austria, or British intervention. If Mr. Disraeli's criticisms, denunciations, and prophecies are worth anything, they warrant the interference that the Opposition want for fear of giving offence to France, shall we say, or from a desire to please Austria. Mr. Disraeli's arg policy have been English?

We undertake to say that no Opposition ever before assumed such a crouching attitude in the British House of Commons. Mr. Bright's vulgar speech about Savoy alone suggests itself for comparison. His cry of "Perish Savoy!" may be paralleled by Mr. Disraeli's speech, which is one reliterated assault upon national independence in foreign politics. Mr. Horsman wants an alliance with Prussia against France: Mr. Kinglake suggests a combined remonstrance; Mr. Seymour Fitzgerald thirsts—we beg pardon, thirsted—for something more than rhetoric, for a sort of league—for something more than rhetoric, for a sort of league or round robbin, with England as ringleader. Mr. Disraeli declines to protest, to remonstrate, to league—the sanctions nothing but abnegation of national views and principles. If you do what you can to give the national Italian party fair play you are wrong, not because the course is wrong in itself, not because it is unfair or unstatesmanilke, but because it leads France to take Savoy; and having taken that course, you are wrong in refraining from showering repeated protests, for six months, against the possible action of France in a certain contingency which might never have arrived. The crime of the Government in the eyes of Mr. Disraeli is, that they have not joined with France or Austria, or both, in imposing what rulers they pleased on the different states. That is a crime of which the British, as well as the Italian people, will readily absolve them.

Lord Bolingbroke said of one of his opponents that

A compliment from him was like the warning of a clock, a sure sign thas he was geing to strike. That is Mr. Whiteside's case. Last week he went out of his way to appland Lord John Russell's despatches on the question of Savoy. This week he turns round and assails him for negligence, and do-nothingness; accuses him of recommending universal suffrage, which he did not recommend, and of keeping the French Government in ignorance of those very views which Mr. Whiteside had applauded so cordially but a few short days before. These contradictions, painful evidences of human weakness, would be incredible were they not stamped on the broad sheet of the Finess. They may be denied, but the denial would be like that of Mr. Seymour Fitzgerald, who says he did not proposal a protest of the great Powers against France, although words to that effect, as reported by the Finess, are continued by the recoilection of Lord John Russell, and actually called forth a reluctant and haughty apology from Mr. Disraeli himself, who saw fit to cover the retreat of his junior partner from a rashly sassumed position.

The plain fact is, that the course of the Government has been practical and consistent throughout. When they heard of the projected annexation of Savoy, they frankly stated their objections. When the project was abundened in July, and its revival rested upon the hypothetical agrandirement of Sardinia, relying, as they had a right to do, upon the broad and explicit declaration of July, they waited until the project sumed a practical shape, and then they repeated, in language as strong but not stronger, the objections made in July. As the project came fully into view, they obtained from the Emperor a promise that he would not proceed without the assent of the people of Savoy and their King, and without consulting the Great Powers, "Then they laid the whole case hefore these Powers, inviting their attention thereto. Certainly, if measured by Lord Malmerston understands as meaning "without obtaining the consent of the Great Powers, fearless adviser of his sovereign in moments when the pressure of calamity and external arrogance was at its highest point. These are services which deserve to be remembered—services to the Italian cause which Count Cavour has been the first to recognise, end which deserve what they have won—the gratitude and affection of the Italian people, and their gallant King.

ANALYSIS OF THE TRADE WITH PRANCE.

ANALYSIS OF THE TRADE WITH FRANCE.

(From the Liverpoot Alkion, March 18).

Accounts to returns which have just been made to the Ilouse of Commons, on the motion of Mr. Salomons, the walne of the exports of road this country to 150,254,853, about one motion before and manufactures, and the other foreign and colonial goods. It appears, however, that 1834 was an exceptional year, for the value of the exports of the following year was £104,218,511, and the next two years exhibit a moderate progressive increase; but which the foreign has declined. One-third in value of the foreign has declined. One-third in value of the foreign has declined. One-third in value of the foreign has declined. One-third value of the office of the value of the other commodities reach £100,000 of annual value. In 1838, however, twice that amount of flax was exported, and in the two preceding years very large shipments of rice were made. The chief of the other commodities was to the commodities and the value of the commodities exported last year ranging between flats, 2021 for the irrade which are likely to the commodities exported last year ranging between 61613, 2022 for the irrat-named down to £113, 461 for the last. Coal, iron, wool, and raw cotton are few months back in the letter of the French Emperor to M. Fould. The value of the exports of the first of these cambed the protective system for the protective system for the protective system for the reach of the protective system for the hand, not. The protection of Belgian and Prussian coal at much withstanding the Livery which are last of these articles has rapidly increased of late years, having nearly doubled since 1864, notwithstanding the competition of Belgian and Prussian coal at much withstanding the Livery was the second the protective system for the protective system of the protective system of t dues, the vexatious delays which they will occasion being of more consequence to the merchant than their pecuniary amount. The result may be, therefore, that after the example of the Emperor in imposing a heavy duty on rags in lieu of the prohibition of their export, Mr. Gladstone may be found to have taken back with one hand what he has given wite the other. It may happen, however, that the doubts and fears of both Englishmen and Frenchmen may be falsined by the results; and experience goes far to encourage the idea that this will be the case. The French conlowners and ironmasters will probably survive the realisation of the Imperial free trade views, as our own farmers have the repeal of the corn laws, and our shipowress the abolition of the navigation laws; and manufacturers on both sides of the channel may be as agreeably surprised as the market gardeners in the neighbourhood of London were when, after having petitioned against the South Coast Railway, on the plea that the Sussex gardeners would become their rivals in supplying the metropolis with vegetables, they found themselves introduced to a profitable trade with Brighton.

A great Reform meeting was held at Huddersfield on Tuesday. The principal speaker was Mr. Leatham, the member for the borough, who analysed the Government Reform Bill, and expressed his disastisfaction at its limited character. Resolutions were adopted accepting the bill as an instalment, but expressing regret that it does not repeal the ratepaying clauses, and propose a more satisfactory redistribution of seats.
